

PERSONAL STATEMENT:

I became acquainted with Los Angeles South Chamber of Commerce (LASCC) about 10 years ago when Dexter McLeod was hosting networking meetings in Compton, California. It was not a Chamber, if you will, but it has blossomed into day what is the Los Angeles South Chamber of Commerce.

More recently, I have become acquainted with a host of positive Black people who not only belong to LASCC, but also belong to the hottest network ever called the Buy Black Movement. The whole purpose of the Buy Black Movement is to get millions of Black people buying from Black-owned business consistently, on a massive scale. Veronica Spigner, the LASCC member who actually hosted me for the first B2B event of 2022. It was in my heart to join a Chamber of Commerce but none had moved me to join until I attend the meeting at LASCC. I was sold when I learned that the vision of LASCC aligns with my vision of increasing the survival and sustainability of my own community as opposed to continuing to contribute to the betterment of other communities that do not necessarily have the best interest of the Black community when they are doing their business. I appreciate the fact that LASCC not only wants me to be more than a member of LASCC, but to deliver superior customer service utilizing my training, skills, abilities, and expertise. I think is a novel idea to certify its members. This aligns with my intentions to present myself to the community as a Subject Matter Expert and Community Stakeholder.

The name of my paralegal practice is called OmUnique Paralegal Service. I have been providing services to the community since 2005. I realize that being a member of LASCC will help me to achieve my career and financial goals pertaining to providing legal services to individuals, attorneys, small businesses, nonprofits, and governmental entities. Much of the work that I am performing as a Freelance Paralegal is produced in a project-focused orientation, on a case-by-case basis. I am looking to earn my Masters in Conflict Resolution and Juris Doctorate.

Currently my focus is on helping TAG TEAM Marketing, International, Incorporated to reach its ultimate goal of Black global economic power. Yet, I have not taken my focus of helping people in my community to receive low-cost, affordable legal assistance. I have been afforded the opportunity to meet other legal professionals as well as attorneys who can deliver legal services when I am not able to do so. In time, my goal is to have a fully operational Paralegal practice.

I am a graduate of the University of West Los Angeles' School of Paralegal Studies with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Paralegal Studies.

I am certificated in the areas of Corporations, Family Law, and Litigation. I chose to pursue a career as a Freelance Paralegal at the end of my program at UWLA in 2005. My services include legal document preparation; litigation support, and other legal services.

I am a former Board member of the Los Angeles Paralegal Association; Family Law Committee

I have a strong background in client service and relations. Currently, my occupation encompasses working as a Freelance paralegal in conjunction with working TAG TEAM Marketing, International, Incorporated as an Independent Marketer.
